

Jeffrey Hollender

Removed for Client Privacy

September 21, 2006

Dear

This is a bit unusual – but I'd like you to consider something that I believe you may find of great value.

I want to introduce you to a good friend of mine, an executive coach, who has spent years developing a coaching program which can only be described as transformative. I've known Marc Vahanian* for more than 20 years in both a personal and business context. Marc's well-tested blend of holistic skills combined with his extraordinary personal dynamic makes him potentially an invaluable asset for you and your company.

Whether working with him in person, or by telephone, Marc's strategies have produced immediate, positive results in a variety of areas:

- Significantly reduced stress
- Enhanced creative problem solving
- Deeper listening skills
- Enhanced individual and group communication
- Discovery of new paths and perspectives
- Increased focus
- Greater ability to stay focused on the big picture

Marc is equally proficient in working with groups of people as he is one on one. His work has taken him from a modest, individual client base into corporate boardrooms including Royal Alliance, a financial services company, as well as individual work with high profile celebrities.

After Marc spent several weeks training Fleetwood Mac before they launched a new international tour Mick Fleetwood described his experience with Marc this way: "... he has guided me to a new way of life, one where body, heart and soul unite as one." My own experience with Marc has been life-changing, which is why I would like you to spend an hour with him on the phone to experience and to explore what his coaching could do for you and your company.

Best regards,

Jeff Hollender

*Marc Vahanian
marc@bodycoach.com
